SJ plans drive-in Movie in the Park format

Locations have yet to be announced

By JULIE SWIDWA
HP Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH — Movies in the Park is coming back to St. Joseph starting in July, but the format may be different than in previous years.

City staff has been working with TPC Technologies of Niles to allow a drive-in movie setting in response to COVID-19 pandemic restrictions.

The St. Joseph City Commission on Monday approved an agreement with TPC to provide services for the 2020 Movies in the Park, for a fee of $12,000.

Greg Grothous, deputy director of parks and grounds, said TPC has recently purchased a large LED screen that will allow for a drive-in format. Depending on the state of the state executive orders and public health recommendations, the city is likely to begin Movies in the Park using the drive-in format and possibly transition to the original format later. In the traditional format, movie-goers sit on lawn chairs or blankets.

The first movie, "Pets 2," is scheduled to be shown July 11 beginning at 8:30 p.m.

The locations for the movies, which are free to the public, will be announced later, Grothous said.

The rest of the planned lineup is:

- July 18: "Abominable"
- July 25: "The Sandlot"
- Aug. 1: "Frozen 2"
- Aug. 8: "The Lion King" (2019)
- Aug. 15: "Toy Story 4"
- Aug. 22: "The Greatest Showman"
- Aug. 29: "Hook" (1991).

Grothous said that because the city is limited on large parking lots to set up in, some of the movies might be shown in locations other than a park.

He said the bottom of the screen will be 10 feet off the ground and the top of the screen 20 feet in the air, allowing for clear sight lines for all types of vehicles. TPC will provide an FM signal so moviegoers can listen while inside their vehicles.

City staff will assist with parking, making sure that one parking space is left between each vehicle so families can get out and "tailgate" while watching the movies, Grothous said.

Youth summer programs

In updates on other summer programs, City Manager John Hodgson said the Whirlpool Compass Fountain will open in early July, but will start out as a splash pad only, without operation of the large water cannons. He said staff is preparing the fountain and he expects it will open the week of July 6.

Also, the St. Joseph Baseball Association and North Lincoln Baseball & Softball Association leagues, held in cooperation with St. Joseph Township, will not have a spring/summer

A passion for helping older adults

Area Agency on Aging care management director oversees team that helps keep seniors in their homes

Q&A

THERESA UHRICH

ST. JOSEPH — Spending time with and helping older adults has always been a passion for Theresa Uhrich.

"I love hearing their stories and learning from them," she said in a recent phone interview.

UHRICH

So that makes her job as the care management director at the Region IV Area Agency on Aging, headquartered in St. Joseph, that much more exciting.

Uhrich, a licensed master social worker who has been with the agency for 12 years now, spearheads local collaborative efforts to support seniors who want to receive care in their own homes rather than nursing home care.

She also represents Southwest Michigan on regional and state efforts to ensure older adults have the supports and services they need to successfully age in the setting of their choice.

In response to the pandemic, she deployed her full team of nurses and social workers to remote service while increasing access to services and supports for over 700 older adults and younger people with disabilities who want to receive care in their own homes – rather than in a nursing home.

Herald-Palladium Staff Writer Alexandra Newman spoke with Uhrich to learn about how she got into her career and what it entails.

How did you end up working with older adults?

I did both my undergrad and graduate schooling in social work. When you go to grad school you concentrate on a specific population. I had been around older adults my whole life because of the charity work my parents did. So when it came to choosing a concentration, it was a no-brainer for me to choose to work with older adults. The program also concentrated on people with disabilities.

While I was in school I learned about Area Agencies on Aging and made a beeline straight to work for one when I was done with school. I'm really privileged they brought me on. It's an amazing group of people to work with and it's cool to be somewhere where we share the same passion for the mission that we have.

What is a typical day like for you?

There really isn't a typical day for me. One of the things I try to do at the end of each day is: I look at my calendar and try to think of what's on the schedule for the next day. Then I try to get in the right headspace for it and how I want to approach it. There's always meetings, and mine typically focus on program development at the agency and PQI (prevention quality indicators). But really it's the work that happens between all of those. That's a lot of consulting with my team, troubleshooting things and responding to questions. There's never a dull day and they go fast.

How has the pandemic changed what you do, if at all?

For me, not much change at all, but for our staff, their typical day did change dramatically. Many of the people on my staff in particular, actually work in the community, they're in people's homes, nursing homes and in hospitals trying to help people get back home again. They have all been doing that work remotely, but we're working on plans and protocols so that we can safely start to visit with people in person again and they're very excited about that.

For the most part we've been trying to leverage technology in new ways and enhance what we already had that are successful. We've been able to come up with new ways to deal with problems created by the pandemic, like how we're addressing food insecurity, social isolation and loneliness and home care support for vulnerable seniors and

The passing of a local legal legend

Legal community honors Judge John Hammond

By JULIE SWIDWA
HP Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH — A fair man. Kind to everyone. A brilliant mind.

The judge.

Those are just some of the words people in the legal field are using to describe the late John T. Hammond.

HAMMOND

Hammond, who served on the bench in Berrien County courts for more than 35 years, died June 11 in Ann Arbor. He was 87.

As news of his death made its way through the legal community, other judges, lawyers and police officers began sharing their memories.

Longtime defense lawyer Scott Sanford described Hammond as a man who loved the law.

"He was my golf partner for years," Sanford said. "He was much better at the law than at the game of golf, but he had a true passion for both."

Bridgman Police Chief Daniel Unruh called Hammond, "One of the most brilliant minds and knowledgeable people I've ever met in my 43 years in law enforcement."

Unruh said Hammond ran a very professional courtroom and wasn't afraid to ask questions while police were testifying.

"One of his quotes that has always stuck with me during a sentencing is, 'Ignorance of the law is no excuse.' There will never be another like Judge Hammond," Unruh said.

Hammond graduated from Benton Harbor High School in 1950 and from the University of Michigan law school in 1958. He joined his father's law practice in Benton Harbor, and six years later was elected Berrien County prosecutor.

With unsubstantiated claim, Trump sows doubt on U.S. election

By ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump opened a new front Monday in his fight against mail-in voting, making unsubstantiated assertions that foreign countries will print up millions of bogus ballots to rig the results and create what he called the "scandal of our times."

The claims not only ignore safeguards that states have implemented to prevent against widespread fraud but they also risk undermining Americans' faith in the election, spreading the very kind of disinformation U.S. authorities have warned foreign adversaries could exploit to foment doubt in the voting process.

Trump accelerated his attacks following a bruising weekend for his reelection campaign, when a lower-than-expected turnout at a rally in Tulsa, Oklahoma, left him seething, and as he fights for a second term during the worst unemployment since the Great Depression. The people with disabilities. We have also been able to continue to provide all of our regular services.

Do you have a project or thing that you're most proud that you and you've done during this time?

The social worker in me doesn't like to do any of the work alone, so I'm really lucky that I get to contribute to projects with our whole team. Whether during the pandemic, or "normal times," you'll always find us working together, supporting one another, being flexible in how we approach problems and challenges, and we really never miss a beat in rising to the serve the community. We've really succeeded in making that a routine, common place thing for us, and so I think that's a pretty remarkable accomplishment. Not many people can say that.

Do you have a favorite part of your job?

That's funny you ask that because this week we asked our staff something similar. What I really like, and what was stressed to me in my program when I was in social work education, is that a human service agency needs to be just that: an agency in service to humans.

I think our agency is 100 percent committed to not just the community, but really understands that the people that work for it are human beings too. We all have a really good, healthy work-life balance. We know in a real and meaningful way that our greatest asset is our people. I really like that, and I know our staff does too.

Then opposite of that, do you have any part of your job you maybe don't like as much?

I don't think there's anything I dislike because I really love how varied by job is. Whether I'm working one-on-one with people, in a group with people, I'm working on things that are affecting our community on very big levels and in very micro ways. There are challenging days, but really that's opportunity in disguise and I love a good opportunity.

When you're not working, what do you like to do?

I, and my team, like to do the things that we work so hard to let other people to be able enjoy as they age. For me, that's connecting with loved ones and getting out into my community. Really just enjoying life to the fullest.

Staying connected to my family is really important to me. I have bi-weekly sibling conference calls with my four siblings and not long ago I taught my grandma how to use Instagram.

Is there anything else you'd like to say or make sure that I include that I didn't ask?

We have an info line (800-654-2810) where our experts can help people explore different ways to stay connected to their loves ones. There are lots of new technologies out there we can help them explore. We can also connect them to the AAA in their local community. We're part of a national network, so that people can even help their older loved ones they're not living near.

BALLOTS

rhetoric, coming as states scramble to adjust voting processes because of the coronavirus pandemic, represents a two-track approach of trying to both block mail-in balloting in advance and setting the stage for challenging the results once it's over.

"It's a way of trying to turn the foreign interference claims that have been made on their head," said Richard Hasen, an election law expert at the University of California, Irvine. "Typically we've heard that the Russian government and others were working to help elect Trump, and here is Trump using fears of foreign interference as a way of bolstering his own side."

"This potentially lays the groundwork," he added, "for him contesting election results."

Though election records obtained by The Associated Press show that a half-dozen senior advisers to the president have voted by mail, others in the administration have recently promoted the notion that states could be inundated with fraudulent ballots from overseas.

Attorney General William Barr raised that prospect in interviews in recent weeks with The New York Times Magazine and Fox News.

"Right now, a foreign country could print up tens of thousands of counterfeit ballots, and be very hard for us to detect which was the right and which was the wrong ballot," Barr told Fox in an interview that aired Sunday.

Evan Vucci / AP

The president tweeted Monday a news report on Barr's remarks as well as a separate message that said: "RIGGED 2020 ELECTION: MILLIONS OF MAIL-IN BALLOTS WILL BE PRINTED BY FOREIGN COUNTRIES, AND OTHERS. IT WILL BE THE SCANDAL OF OUR TIMES!"

But experts say that doomsday scenario is far-fetched.

"Comments like that demonstrate an ignorance of by-mail voting and the technology associated with how it actually works," said Eddie Perez, global director of technology development at the OSET Institute, a nonprofit technology research corporation.

"There are more protocols than people are probably aware of, which would make such an attack rather difficult," he added.

Though fraud in absentee balloting is rare, that's not to say that there aren't more pedestrian problems that could arise as people vote by the mail, including ballots that are intercepted in a mailbox and tampered with. The National Conference of State Legislatures lists on its website multiple disadvantages to the process, including slower reporting of results and the possibility that voters could be coerced by family or friends.

But the list doesn't broach the idea of foreign countries manufacturing their own ballots – a type of fraud that would encounter significant practical obstacles, not least because states say they are adept at differentiating legitimate ballots from inauthentic ones.

The ballots used by Colorado's 64 individual counties are printed exclusively in the United States, distinguished by specific colors and target areas and processed through sensitive scanners designed to weed out the inauthentic, said Secretary of State Jena Griswold. A bipartisan team of election judges conducts signature verification and refers for further investigation suspected instances of double-voting.

And in Washington state, each county is responsible for printing its own ballots and distributing them to voters, whose signatures on the return ballot are cross-checked against the signature on voter registration applications.

"My experience doing this is that usually when people get creative with things like that, you can tell," Washington Secretary of State Kim Wyman said in an interview.

Five states – Colorado, Hawaii, Oregon, Utah and Washington – conduct elections entirely by mail, according to the NCSL. But nearly all states, led by Democratic and Republican governors alike, offer some form of the option.

With health officials saying that voting by mail can help prevent the spread of the coronavirus, many states are moving ahead with plans that ease access to mail-in ballots. Wisconsin recently decided this week to send absentee ballot requests to nearly all voters. Michigan, another swing state, has taken that step as well.

That trend has agitated Trump, who even before Monday has openly railed against absentee voting. He told Politico in an interview published Friday that the "biggest risk" to his reelection is the growing use of mail-in ballots, and suggested that his chances may hinge on whether he can prevail in court against efforts to make absentee voting easier.

He was elected as a district judge in 1968 at age 36, and retired as the longest serving judge in Michigan.

Hammond authored numerous articles on criminal law topics that were published in state and professional publications, and some of his case law decisions are cited in current law school textbooks.

Lawyers who practiced before Hammond say they appreciated his thorough knowledge of the law and his fairness and impartiality.

"I had the privilege of working from time to time as a prosecutor in Judge Hammond's court for some 15 years," said Berrien County Prosecutor Michael Sepic. "Early on I was in awe of his intelligence. We were lucky to have him as a jurist in our county for over 30 years. He contributed to statewide justice initiatives and was a steady hand in local judicial decisions."

Added Sepic: "Judge Hammond represented our judiciary well in an era when judges naturally commanded respect from the lawyers, litigants and the public."

Berrien County Trial Court Judge Gary Bruce said Hammond was, first and foremost, "a legal scholar."

"He studied the law for his entire career and knew it better than any attorney or judge I've ever encountered," Bruce said.

While the rest of us would ask, 'Isn't there a statute that says such and such?' or 'Isn't there a case from the Supreme Court on that point?' Judge Hammond would cite the statue or case by number, page and date," Bruce said.

Bruce said that in discussing a particular statute, Hammond could also cite the legislative history behind it.

"Judge Hammond moved at his own pace, but when he rendered his decisions you couldn't find fault with his reasoning even if you disagreed with the outcome."

Bruce said Hammond was not given to lecturing litigants, but was always willing to give someone a chance to prove themselves, especially young people.

"Nearly his entire life was devoted to the law and the court. The part that wasn't, was devoted to his family and the University of Michigan football team," Bruce said.

On a humorous note, Bruce said Hammond didn't carry his golf clubs in a bag.

"He invented a contraption that held his clubs in kind of a rack, with two spikes in the bottom so he could stick it in the ground," Bruce recalls. "And he had a suction cup on the end of his putter so he could pick the ball up out of the hole without having to bend over."

Family members have said a memorial service for Judge Hammond will be held at a later date at First Congregational Church in St. Joseph.

SJ man dies during rescue of child in river

By JULIE SWIDWA
HP Staff Writer

KIHLSTRAND

ST. JOSEPH — A 45-year-old St. Joseph man lost his life Friday in a mishap on the St. Joseph River in Royalton Township during his rescue of a child struggling in the water.

The Berrien County Sheriff's Office in a news release said it is believed that the man drowned. Though police did not release his identity, family members identified him Monday as Matthew Ryan Kihlstrand. His obituary is printed in today's Herald-Palladium.

Police say two adults and three children were enjoying a day on the river on a pontoon boat about a mile down river from the Jasper Dairy boat launch.

Police received a 911 call at about 7:15 p.m. about a person in distress and missing in the river. The Berrien County Sheriff's Office Marine Unit, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the Royalton Township Fire Department and the Berrien Springs Oronoko Township Fire Department responded with personnel and boats. The Great Lakes Drone Co. and the Great Lakes Search and Recovery Co. also assisted.

The initial investigation revealed that a child began struggling in the water and one of the adults (Kihlstrand) jumped in and successfully rescued the child. But he went under water and could not immediately be found.

Kihlstrand's body was later recovered from the river about a half-mile down river from where he was last seen.

An autopsy will be performed at the Western Michigan University Homer Stryker School of Medicine, the sheriff's office said.

Clementine's kitchen fire temporarily closes restaurant

SOUTH HAVEN — A fire in the kitchen at Clementine's over the weekend temporarily closed the popular downtown eatery,

South Haven Area Emergency Services personnel contained the fire in the kitchen, after responding to the 1:30 p.m. call on Saturday at 500 Phoenix Street.

One SHAES firefighter was treated at the scene for heat exhaustion, according to a news release. The outdoor temperature at the time was 91 degrees.

Emergency crews were first alerted by Clementine's employees, who smelled smoke. Patrons of the business were safely evacuated, according to the release, as smoke had infiltrated a non-public area on an upper level.

First responders discovered the fire in a first-floor kitchen wall, behind a broiler. The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Clementine's had just reopened June 15 after being closed for three months because of the COVID-19 pandemic. It closed again after the fire so repairs could be made. The restaurant was expected to reopen today.

Berrien RESA names Hoppstock as district's next superintendent

By TONY WITTKOWSKI
HP Staff Writer

BERRIEN SPRINGS — The Berrien RESA Board of Education appointed Eric Hoppstock as the district's next superintendent during a special board meeting Monday.

Hoppstock, who is currently assistant superintendent and chief academic officer, will assume his new role on July 1. The vote by the board was unanimous.

For over three decades, Hoppstock has provided educational services to schools and students across Berrien County.

Beginning his career at Berrien RESA in 1987, he was a school psychologist before becoming the supervisor of the district's special education department, and most recently became the district's assistant superintendent.

Hoppstock has also served as a state and national leader, helping shape special education legislation and policy, the board said.

"Eric has already been leading the district for a number of years," Berrien RESA Board of Education President Cathy Bair said in a news release. "His in-depth educational background, understanding of ISD-level operations, his management skills and his leadership abilities will serve our staff and constituents well. I am excited to watch our district thrive under Eric's innovative and visionary style of leadership. I am confident he will do an exceptional job."

Hoppstock agreed to an annual salary of $165,000 for his three-year contract.

The board previously chose Matthew Wandrie, the superintendent at Lapeer Public Schools, to replace Dr. Kevin Ivers as Berrien's next superintendent.

However, at the 11th hour Wandrie opted to stay with his current school district and notified Berrien RESA's school board of his decision last week.

Hoppstock was among the finalists initially considered for the position.

Ivers, Berrien RESA's current superintendent, will retire June 30. He served as the superintendent for 10 years before announcing his intention to retire last summer.

IN BRIEF

BH officials to discuss budget priorities Wednesday

BENTON HARBOR — Residents will have the opportunity to deliver input regarding Benton Harbor's budget priorities at the city's budget hearing at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The session will be held online.

If nothing is changed, the city's 2020-21 budget will be $437,721 in the red, meaning the city will have to dip into its rainy day fund to balance the budget, City Manager Ellis Mitchell told members of the Personnel and Finance Committee on Monday.

Mitchell said that city department heads have submitted to him their wish lists, which include adding two public safety officers, two people to run the parks, two people to do public relations and two people in code enforcement, along with buying a street sweeper and a dump truck. If all that is done, he said the 2020-2021 budget would be $1.5 million in the red.

Instructions on how to join Wednesday's meeting can be found on the city's website at www.bhcity.us.

SOUTH HAVEN SCHOOLS

Duo proves they have the Wright stuff

Tandem impresses national judges with exhibit about famed fliers Orville and Wilbur Wright

SOUTH HAVEN — Third time's the charm proved true for two South Haven High School students, who have been chosen as finalists in the annual National History Day competition.

Incoming juniors Nic Sheppard and Myles Daugherty placed seventh out of 99 entries in the Senior Division Individual Exhibit category, while also earning the Senior Division Outstanding Affiliate award, which designates their exhibit as best-in-the-state, according to a news release issued Monday by the Historical Society of Michigan.

"Top 10 in the nation, this is an incredible feat," South Haven History Club Advisor Julie Shepard said. "This was their third consecutive national level competition as a team."

Sheppard and Daugherty titled their exhibit "From Bicycles and Birdwatching to Changing the World – The Wright Brothers: Breaking the Barrier of Flight."

To get ready for the competition, Sheppard and Daugherty traveled to the National Museum of the United States Air Force and the Wright Brothers National Museum in Dayton, Ohio, to study about aviators Orville and Wilbur Wright, who are credited with successfully creating and flying the first motor-driven airplane, the Wright Flyer, at Kitty Hawk, N.C. in 1903.

As part of their entry, Daugherty and Sheppard modeled the exhibit panels to resemble the brick bicycle factory where the Wright brothers worked. The two students also built a replica of the first plane the two brothers successfully flew and hung it above the exhibit's walls.

Judges were impressed.

"They could tell their passion from their display and were impressed with the expanse of their research," Julie Sheppard said. "They also thought their idea to construct the boards as the Wright's bike shop factory was a great idea."

When Daugherty and Sheppard's exhibit won first place at the Michigan History Day competition in May, competition organizers asked if they could use the exhibit as an example and teaching tool for other history clubs in Michigan.

A total of six South Haven History Club members qualified for the national contest after advancing through both the regional and state competitions earlier in the spring.

Both the state and national events took place online due to the coronavirus pandemic. The national competition began June 14 and ended this past Saturday.

"The History Day theme for 2020 – Breaking Barriers in History – became a reality this year. Students faced numerous challenges, from schools being closed before they could access their projects to not being able to work in-person with group members and sponsors," said Amy Bradfield, state coordinator for Michigan History Day. "I am proud of our students for overcoming the obstacles caused by the coronavirus pandemic and persevering in their mission to share history."

Michigan History Day is an affiliate of National History Day, which was established in 1974 and offers yearlong project-based learning that engages more than half a million middle and high school students around the world annually, according to the Historical Society of Michigan. Based on an annual theme, students choose to explore and research a local, national or international historical topic. Students then present their work in one of five categories: performances, exhibits, papers, websites and documentaries.

Sadie Esther (Davis) Leonard

Dec. 12, 1936 – June 14, 2020

Sadie Esther (Davis) Leonard of Benton Harbor passed away quietly on June 14, 2020, at Cartel Inns of Lakeland in Royalton Township. She fought the ravages of cancer until she was finally called home by her Heavenly Father.

Sadie was born on Dec. 12, 1936, to Walter and Sara Davis in Louisville, Ky., where she grew up and attended Central High School. After graduation she attended Kentucky State University and received a bachelor's degree in physical education with a minor in English. She later earned a master's degree in education from Michigan State University. Sadie married her husband, Arnold, on June 4, 1960, moved to Covert, and later to Benton Harbor, where they raised their three children, Leslie, James and Kevin, with whom she had very close relationships. Sadie and Arnold were married for 60 years.

Sadie began her career in education at the Covert Public School System as a physical education teacher and pioneered its physical education curriculum. She continued her career as an educator in the Benton Harbor Area Schools System as an English teacher at Benton Harbor Junior High School and Fairplain Junior High School before she retired.

Sadie was a long-time member at Union Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Church. She was a member and president of its senior choir. She was a charter member of the Senior Club, and a member of the Lay Organization. Sadie was a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., Iota Iota Omega Chapter, where she achieved Silver Member status. Sadie was also a devoted and loving member of the Strong Women of Faith Breast Cancer Support Group and was an active member of the Voices of Praise Survivor Choir.

Sadie was fun-loving and good humored. She was direct, determined and loving. Sadie's legacy will live on through her family and the many people whose lives she touched during her 83 years.

Sadie was preceded in death by her parents, Walter and Sara Davis; brother, William Davis Sr.; sister, Viola Spencer; and nephew, Donald Smith.

Sadie is survived by her husband, Arnold Leonard; her beloved children, Leslie (Sharon), James (Darlene) and Kevin (Celes); wonderful grandsons, Marsalis, Quincy and Carter; nephews, William Davis Jr., Marc Smith and Timothy Smith; and nieces, Shelya Smith and Linda Jackson.

The wake will take place from 5-7 p.m. Thursday, June 25, at Starks & Menchinger Family Funeral Home, 2650 Niles Road, St. Joseph. Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, June 26. Source: MLB players' board rejects 60-game season

By RONALD BLUM
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — The executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association rejected a proposed 60-game schedule by a 33-5 vote, daring Commissioner Rob Manfred to give a unilateral order for the regular season's start and provoke what figures to be lengthy and costly litigation over the impact of the coronavirus.

The union's vote was confirmed by a person familiar with the meeting who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the balloting was not made public.

The union said in a statement that the "board reaffirmed the players' eagerness to return to work as soon and as safely as possible."

Manfred was expected to take the next step later Monday as baseball descends into the type of labor strife that led to eight work stoppages from 1972-95.

With the collapse of a negotiated deal, playoffs are set to remain at 10 teams rather than expand to 16, and the proposed expansion of the designated hitter to games involving NL teams would be off. Also falling through for now is a planned experiment that would have had a runner start each extra inning on second base.

Spring training was suspended on March 12, two weeks ahead of scheduled openers, and the sides have reverted to the familiar financial infighting that fractured the sport in the past. An initial deal March 26 called for players to receive prorated salaries, but that agreement did not require MLB to play in empty ballparks.

Players refused to alter from their insistence on prorated salaries, and MLB finally agreed last week during a meeting between Manfred and union head Tony Clark. But the sides remained about $275 million apart after weeks of talks. MLB offered 60 games and $1.48 billion from salaries that originally totaled $4 billion, plus a $25 million postseason players' pool. The union wanted 70 games and $1.73 billion plus a $50 million pool.

Players are expected to file a grievance, claiming MLB violated a provision in the March agreement requiring both sides to "work in good faith to as soon as is practicable commence play, and complete the fullest 2020 championship season and postseason that is economically feasible" consistent with several provisions. MLB is expected to file a grievance accusing the union of negotiating in bad faith.

BRIDGE

Mark Twain said of Rudyard Kipling, "Between us, we cover all knowledge; he knows all that can be known, and I know the rest."

That would be a tough twosome to take on in a general knowledge quiz. In a bridge setting, though, it can be important to play the card that you are known to hold. How does that apply in this four-spade contract?

West led the club 10: jack, ace, eight. After East shifted to the heart eight, what did declarer do?

North's two-diamond response was natural and game-forcing.

With a diamond to lose, South could afford to concede only one trump trick. The initial plan was to hope that East started with royal-10-third or any beneficial doubleton. Declarer would expect to play first low to his nine, then low to the jack.

So, South won with dummy's heart ace and played a spade to his nine, losing to West's queen. Now West led another heart. Declarer won and played a diamond to the queen and ace. After winning East's diamond return on the board, South called for dummy's second spade. What happened then?

Declarer was getting ready to play his jack, but East followed suit with the four. Just in time, South hit the brakes. What was the spade position? East could not have started with K-10-2. If he had K-10-4-2, the contract was unmakable. But if he had 10-4-2 ... Declarer put up his ace to bring down West's king and make his contract.

East should have played the spade 10 on dummy's seven, the card he was known to hold from the first round of the suit.

Seeing son's killer go free opens old wounds for family

DEAR ABBY: My son was murdered four years ago by a supposed friend. Despite a 10-year sentence, the murderer was released from prison this month.

The perpetrator and my son had some mutual friends. When I go onto the convicted manslaughterer's Facebook page, he has many people congratulating and welcoming him home.

Jeanne Phillips
Dear Abby

The murderer has not once apologized or shown remorse. He was on home incarceration for six months before he was sentenced for manslaughter, and during that time, he impregnated his girlfriend instead of thinking about the devastation he's caused my family. My son will NEVER have a family.

Instead of announcing to his Facebook friends and family that he's on his way home and that he is home, I feel he should keep his mouth shut and live a quiet life. I cannot believe that murderers and rapists receive respect and congratulations once they reenter society. Do people not recognize the devastation that has been caused to surviving family members of the victim? Or do they no longer care until something like this affects them and their families? – Hurt Again In Kentucky

DEAR HURT AGAIN: Please accept my sympathy for the tragic loss of your son. Nothing can take away the pain of losing a child, let alone at the hand of another person. The family and friends of the person who killed your son appear to have lost sight of the reason for his incarceration. But viewed from another perspective, they are happy to have their loved one back with them, which is why they are posting welcome messages.

A resource that might help you is the National Organization of Parents of Murdered Children Inc. You can find it by going to pomc.com. I hope you will give it a try. My heart goes out to you.

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes the simplest situations make me wonder the most. Recently we needed to use the local ATM. When we drove by, we could see it was being filled by an armored truck. My husband said I should get in line. I looked around and saw other people waiting in their cars, so I thought I would do the same. My husband repeated that I should get out and get in line. Faced with the choice of standing in line or being nagged by my husband, I chose the former and was the first person to form a line.

After 20 minutes standing there and reading the news on my phone, the ATM guards seemed to be finished. That's when a woman approached me and said she had been waiting longer than me, albeit in her car, and I would have to go to the end of the line. I ignored her.

Soon, a guard motioned to me that the ATM was available. As I was making my withdrawal, I could hear the woman say to the others now lined up behind her that I had jumped the line and she called me an expletive, which two others in line repeated. Was I wrong to have stood my ground, or should I have moved to the back? – Waiting In Texas

DEAR WAITING: If you were the first person to stand at the ATM while others chose to wait in the comfort of their vehicles, you owed no one an apology. The person who was out of line (literally) was the woman who called you an expletive, and you were right to ignore her.

Am I 'disabled enough' to use a wheelchair?

DEAR CAROLYN: Six years ago, I suddenly lost feeling in my fingers and toes and had neuropathic pain that was debilitating and stopped me from working. We were able to figure out what the disease was and I mostly recovered.

I still have pain/muscle weakness in my feet when I walk too much. I'm in my early 30s now but cannot go to the grocery store, concerts or museums because of how much walking they take and the pain that results. Some suggest I use a wheelchair for these but I feel like if I do it's a lie. I'm physically able to walk, it just results in pain, and thus I feel like a fake if I'm in a wheelchair.

Carolyn Hax

I now avoid anything that results in walking, and thus I've gotten mad at life for handing me these circumstances that keep me from doing normal things.

I've asked my family/friends if I'm a fake if I use a wheelchair without NEEDING it, but I feel like they are all biased from dealing with the fallout of me walking too much (miserable, in pain, unable to do daily activities for the subsequent days/weeks) and so I'm writing to you. I think part of my issue is that I look able-bodied and so I worry about being judged, or getting sympathy I don't deserve. I feel like a wheelchair should be reserved for those truly disabled. What's your opinion? – Invisible Disability

INVISIBLE DISABILITY: My opinion is that our tough-it-out, I'll-do-anything-to-avoid-being-judged culture has become a kind of collective insanity.

Use whatever medical devices you require to participate fully in life. The end.

I'm glad you're doing better. Now, please, just start doing.

RE: Invisible: The human mind is incredible at rationalizing. It's really, really common for disabled people to think they're not disabled, or disabled enough, even when the average sensible person would read their symptoms and understand that yes, this person is experiencing something truly debilitating.

Debilitating pain is a disability. On top of that, your brain is lying to you about it. Please stop beating yourself up for not looking like Tiny Tim. – Anonymous

RE: Invisible: I have peripheral neuropathy and can't walk any distance. Instead of a wheelchair, consider a mobility scooter. People don't "look at you funny" when you get off a scooter and walk short distances as they might if you use a wheelchair. Also, you have my deepest sympathy. People just don't understand. – I Am You

RE: Invisible: Military veteran here. In my experience, rarely do veterans park in the "reserved for veterans" spaces because they always think there's someone "more veteran" or deserving than they are. You say in your letter "I've gotten mad at life for handing me these circumstances that keep me from doing normal things," but your whole letter is about how you could do normal things if you just used a wheelchair. So life isn't keeping you from doing them, you are.

All that is to say if you look hard enough, you can find someone who needs a wheelchair more than you, but that doesn't mean you don't need it. Will people judge you? Not the decent ones. – Veteran

VETERAN: So well said, thank you.

BRIDGE

I learned bridge in Newport, which is about 14 miles east of Cardiff, the capital of Wales. One of the regulars at the Newport Bridge Club, Julius Ernst, twice helped me make big strides forward.

One Monday, he asked me how my partner and I had bid the slam deal the previous Monday. I immediately asked, "What slam?" He said, "If you can't remember the deals, you will never make a bridge player." That needled me into action. After some thought, I recalled the deal he was mentioning. I told him what our sequence had been, and that I didn't see what we could have done differently. Ernst said, "Yes, we (he and his wife) had the same sequence."

Some time later, he held the West cards in this deal. What happened in my contract of three no-trump after he led the spade queen?

I opened one club because we used the weak no-trump, showing only 12-14 points. But when partner made a limit raise, I took a shot at three no-trump.

I had seven top tricks, but now being wide open in spades, I had to win nine tricks immediately. I had to take one spade, three diamonds, one club and four hearts.

I won the second spade trick and played a heart to dummy's jack. Great – the finesse won. Then I cashed the ace, and Ernst smoothly played the queen. Even better, I thought. One good result coming up. I confidently played a heart to my nine, but with a satisfied grunt, Ernst produced the 10 from his hand, and I went down one.

Ernst had played the card he was known to hold, and I had learned another lesson from him.

LaVern worked for many years as a tool and die maker, earning the title of "Master." He currently worked at Wolverine Metal Stamping, where he began his career as an apprentice many years ago. LaVern enjoyed the simple things in life: classic American-made cars, the beauty of Grand Traverse and the "occasional" cocktail. He was an honorary member of the Baroda American Legion. He might not have enjoyed big gatherings, but he was always the life of the party. LaVern was committed to his family and his community, being a lifelong employee in the Southwest Michigan area was something he was very proud of.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

25 years ago – 1995

Seven hundred bicycle riders, ages from 6 to 90, will start riding from Bridgman Sunday in the 14th annual Pedal Across Lower Michigan. Cyclists from as far away as California and Maryland will arrive Friday at Sterling State Park near Monroe, having pedaled 249 miles. One overnight stay will be in Cassopolis.

Participants will start arriving Saturday afternoon at Bridgman High School and most will camp overnight there. The school Athletic Boosters will host a dinner that night. Bridgman merchants also are looking forward to having 700 visitors in town.

35 years ago – 1985

St. Joseph is so serious about band concerts that a tax of up to 6/10 mill is written into the city charter "for the maintenance and employment, under municipal control, of a band." City Manager William Sinclair says he knows of no other municipality that levies a tax to support a band.

The Municipal Band starts another season tomorrow with concerts at the Howard Bandshell in Lake Bluff Park. Although the Municipal Band was formally organized in 1938, it is known that the City of St. Joseph has had a band of some sorts since the 1890s funded by downtown merchants who wanted to attract people from cruise ships to the shopping district.

50 years ago – 1970

A 97-by-206-foot addition to Shoppers Fair, at M-139 and Napier Avenue, Benton Township, is being erected in a major store expansion program. Estimated construction cost is $100,000. A spokesman for the store said the addition was undertaken because of the response of buyers since the store opened. Layouts for merchandise are still being worked out by the main office for the store.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, June 23, the 175th day of 2020. There are 191 days left in the year.

Highlight in history:

On June 23, 1888, abolitionist Frederick Douglass received one vote from the Kentucky delegation at the Republican convention in Chicago, effectively making him the first Black candidate to have his name placed in nomination for U.S. president. (The nomination went to Benjamin Harrison.)

Seattle will move to dismantle protest zone, mayor says

By GENE JOHNSON
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Faced with growing pressure to crack down on an "occupied" protest zone following two weekend shootings, Seattle's mayor said Monday that officials will move to wind down the blocks-long span of city streets taken over two weeks ago that President Donald Trump asserted is run by "anarchists."

Mayor Jenny Durkan said at a news conference that the violence was distracting from changes sought by thousands of peaceful protesters seeking to address racial inequity and police brutality. She said the city is working with the community to bring the "Capitol Hill Occupied Protest" zone to an end.

"The cumulative impacts of the gatherings and protests and the nighttime atmosphere and violence has led to increasingly difficult circumstances for our businesses and residents," Durkan said. "The impacts have increased and the safety has decreased."

A shooting Sunday night was the second in less than 48 hours at the edge of the zone, named for the Capitol Hill neighborhood near downtown that emerged during nationwide protests over the police killing of George Floyd.

The 17-year-old victim, who was shot in the arm, declined to speak with detectives, police said. Gunfire early Saturday left a 19-year-old man dead and another person critically wounded. It was not apparent if the shootings had anything to do with the protest.

Protesters cordoned off the several-block area, known as CHOP, near a police station after clashes with officers. Seattle riot squads unleashed tear gas, pepper spray and flash-bangs on large crowds of mostly peaceful protesters, drawing condemnation from many city leaders and a federal court order temporarily banning the use of the weapons on demonstrators.

U-Michigan term to start Aug. 31

ANN ARBOR (AP) — The fall term at the University of Michigan will open Aug. 31 with a mix of remote learning and in-person classes at the Ann Arbor campus, the school announced Monday in its latest response to the coronavirus.

Residence halls will be open, but there will be an emphasis on boxed meals and fewer people in dining rooms.

The pandemic has been "substantially contained" in Michigan and other parts of the U.S., although the potential for new infections will continue until a vaccine or drug regimen is developed, said President Mark Schlissel, who is also a medical doctor.

Large classes will be held online, small classes will meet in-person and other classes will be a mix of both.

"Some students will choose or need to take all their classes remotely, and we'll provide a robust set of fully remote classes that will enable most students to make that choice," Schlissel said.

There will be no in-person classes after Thanksgiving. Instruction and final exams from Nov. 30 to Dec. 18 will be conducted remotely. The winter term will start on Jan. 19.

"We'll provide more details in the coming weeks. ... There are few, if any, one-size-fits-all solutions at a university with our scale and breadth under such unusual circumstances," Schlissel said.

The university had more than 31,000 undergraduate students and nearly 17,000 graduate students in fall 2019.
